THE DISCOVERY OF 21ST CENTURY DESIGN VOCABULARY

There are moments along the time line of history when accepted design standards are turned on their head and a new design vocabulary for the ages emerges.

Sometimes this transition is organic and evolves over time and sometime this discovery is sudden and credited to a small group of brilliant visionaries coming together with a common calling.

For the 20th Century, we all know early English design vocabulary, Art Deco, Art Nouveau, Bauhaus design, the 1950s and Memphis.

Since the 1970s, reinterpreting the classics of the past has been as close as the design community has come to finding a new approach to design.

By enlisting the design giants of our time, COOPER & GRAHAM is discovering the design vocabulary of the 21st Century.

SKYLINER

BY ANDRÉ FU

SKYLINER seeks to embrace the spirit of the modern Asian cities - tactile, fresh, bold, contemporary and demonstrating a relaxed luxury.

The inspirations have been interpreted as a series of pure forms that interlock, akin to contemporary building forms.

They are interlocking sculptures, demonstrating a perfect marriage of art, form and function.

ANDRÉ FU

ABOUT

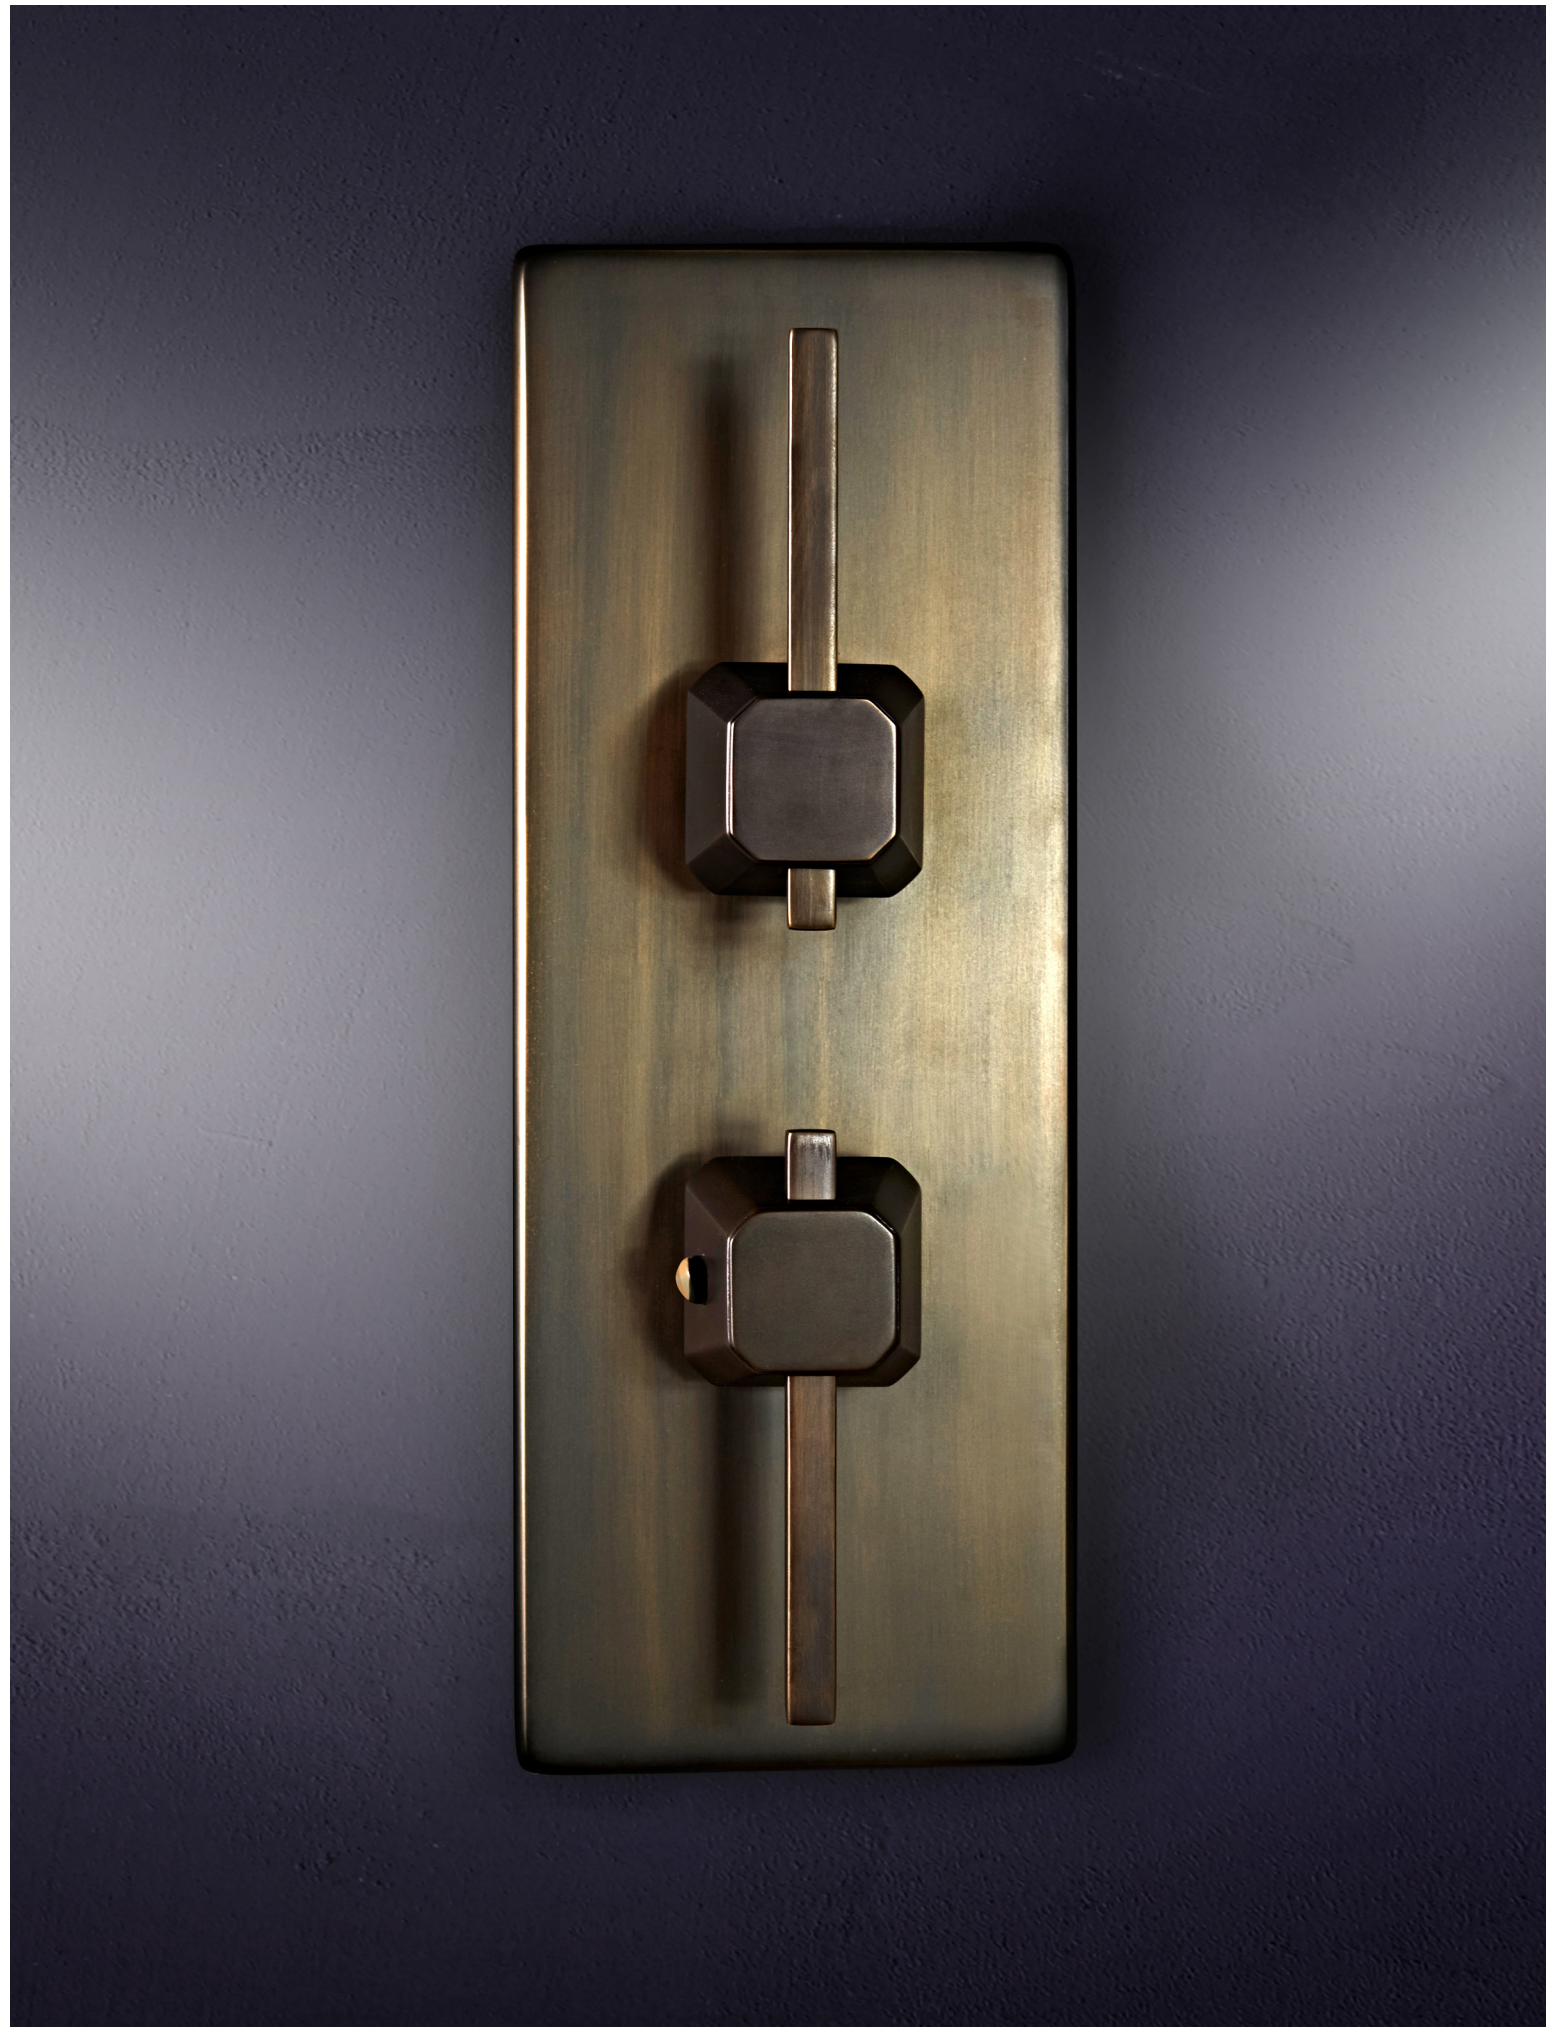

One of the world's most sought-after architects/designers, André Fu is the architect behind major luxury hotels such as as Maybourne Hotel Group, Four Seasons Hotels & Resorts, Shangri-la Hotels, Swire Hotels, Capella Hotels and Park Hyatt Hotels, to mention just a few examples.

André Fu's design studio "AFSO" exists to create distinct projects. Established by Fu in 2000, it is recognized for its work in sensuous, unique hospitality venues.

Fu is widely admired for his ability to marry elements outside of architecture or interior design into a unified whole, and this skill is reflected in his new bath collection, SKYLINER.
